

Marius Bluemel (programme manager) started working for New World Foundation in September 2004. He is a trained educationist/educational psychologist and currently employed as the programme manager of NWF. In addition to that, he is responsible for the men work (Strategy 4). In his free time Marius tries to spend as much time as possible with his son Dylan, his daughter Luca Hannah, his wife Colleen and his family dog Molo.

“As a manager I see myself mainly as support structure for the various strategies and programmes of NWF. I make sure that the strategic plan and operational plan get implemented and that the reporting is up to date.

I enjoy working for New World Foundation because of the vision of building a new world of hope, justice and peace and the incredible friendly team of staff members. In a world in which the gap between the rich and the poor is getting wider and wider the topics of justice (social justice), peaceful living together and sowing hope are of paramount importance. In a very difficult environment and very difficult circumstances NWF is addressing these topics and is running fantastic programmes for the marginalized and poor."
