06. MAKE YOUR MARK

We love a bookmark and Krzysztof Lukaszik's sculptural series of stone objects are perfect for saving pages on. Each corresponds to a different size of reading material, from paperbacks to magazines. The MAS-Luxe graduate from ECAL opted to work with marble and limestone as a nod to the marbled covers and pages of traditionally bound books. 'Petrifications' bookmarks, all prototypes, by Krzysztof Lukaszik

07. STACK 'EM UP

The latest project in product design consultancy Vitamin's portfolio is a collection of limited-edition, interactive vessels, which stack together like a highly refined children's toy. Each configuration of base, tube and rings can be customised, mixing materials such as marble, cork, amber, gold and black walnut. 'Element Vessel No 1', £7,440, made to order, by Vitamin, www.vitaminruling.com

04. TURN OF THE SCREW

Although still studying for her masters degree, Norwegian designer Caroline Olsson is already enjoying a stream of successes. These wood-turned lamps in birch and blown glass, first presented at ICFF in New York, are inspired by old-fashioned woodworking benches, and the brightness is controlled by turning the screws. 'Turn' lamps, prototypes, by Caroline Olsson, www.carolineolsson.no

05. SQUARE DEAL

The eclectic style of LA-based design collective, Commune, has been immortalised in a collection of tiles for Exquisite Surfaces. The six abstract, geometric designs, inspired by Brazilian landscape artist Roberto Burle Marx, feature optional brass, wood, pewter or copper inserts for visual impact. 'Sizio' tiles, $13 ($23 with inserts), by Commune, for Exquisite Surfaces, www.communedesign.com, www.xsurfaces.com

08. SNACK ATTACK

When it comes to good food, Singaporeans are spoilt for choice. Jason Atherton is the island's newest import and has quickly followed the opening of Pollen with a more casual bistro, Keong Saik Snacks – serving up modern British grub, like fish and oysters and 'Jason's Very Hot Dog', topped with jalapenos, avocado, English cheddar and lime ketchup. 49 Keong Saik Road, Singapore, www.keongsaiksnacks.com

09. BETA BLOCKERS

Vancouver-based confectioner Beta 5 is dedicated to satisfying Canada's sweet tooth. From chocolate-covered caramelised hazelnuts, salted butter caramels, hand-painted ganaches, and peanut butter praline cookies, it's got all sweet bases covered. Malt balls, $12; salted chocolate caramels, $19 for 12; signature ganaches, $25 for 12; 'Darkest' chocolate bar, $9, all by Beta 5, www.beta-5.com
